There is a greater demand for talented cooks than ever before. Our program aims to improve skill sets to match demand, while exceeding overall food service industry standards. The pathway we take students down typically leads them to the niche they will fill throughout their career.

Professor Ratliff, Ph.D., MSW, BSW, Human Services-Board Certified Practitioner
School of Humanities & Social Science

Teaching competent and caring human service practitioners to confront 21st century problems is one of the most powerful weapons I can think of to change the world. I strive to inspire hope, ignite imagination, and instill a concern for humanity, because at Reynolds, we ARE Human Services.

Professor Sofinski, Ph.D.
School of Humanities & Social Science

As program coordinator, I have a unique, bird's-eye view to see a student start at the beginning, go through tremendous growth, and leave not with a mere memory, but with knowledge and skill that opens the door to opportunities he or she never knew existed.

"It's not for the weak of heart... It's a lot of hard work. But, it's great. Even if you don't know what you're going to do, the ACA lets you explore lots of things. It's very rewarding to get two years of college out of the way before the end of high school."
